How does Shakespeare present the relationship between Hamlet and Horatio, here and elsewhere in the play?

In your answer you should consider:

- Shakespeare's language choices

HORATIO

It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.

MARCELLUS Look with what courteous action

It waves you to a more removèd ground.
But do not go with it.

HORATIO No, by no means.

HAMLET

It will not speak. Then I will follow it.

HORATIO

Do not, my lord.

HAMLET Why, what should be the fear?

I do not set my life at a pin's fee.
And for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?
It waves me forth again. I'll follow it.

HORATIO

What if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord,
Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff
That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
And there assume some other, horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason
And draw you into madness? Think of it.
The very place puts toys of desperation,
Without more motive, into every brain
That looks so many fathoms to the sea
And hears it roar beneath.

HAMLET It waves me still. –

Go on. I'll follow thee.

MARCELLUS

You shall not go, my lord.

HAMLET

Hold off your hands.

HORATIO

Be ruled. You shall not go.

How does Shakespeare explore ideas about betrayal, here and elsewhere in the play?

In your answer you should consider:

- Shakespeare's language choices
- the ways in which attitudes and values are conveyed.

GHOST ... But know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life
Now wears his crown.

HAMLET O my prophetic soul!
My uncle?

GHOST
Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts –
O wicked wit and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce! – won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming-virtuous Queen.
O Hamlet, what a falling off was there,
From me, whose love was of that dignity
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!
But virtue as it never will be moved,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven,
So lust, though to a radiant angel linked,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed
And prey on garbage.
But soft, methinks I scent the morning air.
Brief let me be. Sleeping within my orchard,
My custom always of the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole
With juice of cursed hebona in a vial,
And in the porches of my ears did pour
The leperous distilment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man
That swift as quicksilver it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body,
And with a sudden vigour it doth posset
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood. So did it mine.
And a most instant tetter barked about,
Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust
All my smooth body.
Thus was I sleeping by a brother's hand
Of life, of crown, of queen at once dispatched,
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhouseled, disappointed, unaneled,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head.
O, horrible! O, horrible! Most horrible!

In your answer you should consider:

MARIA Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for tonight. Since the youth of the Count's was today with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him. If I do not gull him into a nayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed. I know I can do it.

SIR TOBY Possess us, possess us, tell us something of him.

MARIA Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of puritan –

SIR ANDREW O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

SIR TOBY What, for being a puritan? Thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

SIR ANDREW I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

MARIA The devil a puritan that he is, or anything, constantly, but a time-pleaser, an affectioned ass that cons state without book and utters it by great swathes; the best persuaded of himself, so crammed, as he thinks, with excellencies, that it is his grounds of faith that all that look on him love him – and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

SIR TOBY What wilt thou do?

MARIA I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love; wherein, by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expressure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like my lady, your niece; on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

SIR TOBY Excellent! I smell a device.

SIR ANDREW I have't in my nose too.

SIR TOBY He shall think by the letters that thou wilt drop that they come from my niece, and that she's in love with him.

MARIA My purpose is indeed a horse of that colour.

SIR ANDREW And your horse now would make him an ass.

MARIA Ass, I doubt not.

SIR ANDREW O, 'twill be admirable!

MARIA Sport royal, I warrant you. I know my physic will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter. Observe his construction of it. For this night, to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell.

SEBASTIAN

I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman.
But had it been the brother of my blood
I must have done no less, with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me; and by that
I do perceive it hath offended you.
Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago.

ORSINO

One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons!
A natural perspective, that is and is not.

SEBASTIAN

Antonio! O, my dear Antonio!
How have the hours racked and tortured me
Since I have lost thee!

ANTONIO

Sebastian, are you?

SEBASTIAN

Fear'st thou that, Antonio?

ANTONIO

How have you made division of yourself?
An apple cleft in two is not more twin
Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

OLIVIA

Most wonderful!

SEBASTIAN

Do I stand there? I never had a brother;
Nor can there be that deity in my nature
Of here and everywhere. I had a sister
Whom the blind waves and surges have devoured.
Of charity, what kin are you to me?
What countryman? What name? What parentage?

VIOLA

Of Messaline. Sebastian was my father.
Such a Sebastian was my brother too.
So went he suited to his watery tomb.
If spirits can assume both form and suit
You come to fright us.

How does Shakespeare present Kent, here and elsewhere in the play?

In your answer you should consider:

KENT

Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain.
I have seen better faces in my time
Than stands on any shoulder that I see
Before me at this instant.

CORNWALL

This is some fellow
Who, having been praised for bluntness, doth affect
A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb
Quite from his nature. He cannot flatter, he!
An honest mind and plain – he must speak truth!
And they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness
Harbour more craft and more corrupter ends
Than twenty silly-ducking observants
That stretch their duties nicely.

KENT

Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity,
Under th'allowance of your great aspect
Whose influence like the wreath of radiant fire
On flickering Phoebus' front –

CORNWALL

What mean'st by this?

KENT To go out of my dialect which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer. He that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.

CORNWALL What was th'offence you gave him?

OSWALD I never gave him any.

It pleased the King his master very late
To strike at me upon his misconstruction,
When he, compact, and flattering his displeasure,
Tripped me behind; being down, insulted, railed,
And put upon him such a deal of man
That worthied him, got praises of the King
For him attempting who was self-subdued;
And in the fleshment of this dread exploit
Drew on me here again.

KENT

None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.

Suspend thy purpose if thou didst intend

Into her womb convey sterility,
Dry up in her the organs of increase,
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her. If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen, that it may live
And be a thwart disnatured torment to her.
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks,
Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt, that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child! Away, away! Exit

That these hot tears which break from me perforce

Th'untented woundings of a father's curse

To temper clay. Yea, is't come to this?

Nine changes of the watery star hath been
The shepherd's note since we have left our throne
Without a burden. Time as long again
Would be filled up, my brother, with our thanks,
And yet we should for perpetuity
Go hence in debt. And therefore, like a cipher
Yet standing in rich place, I multiply
With one 'We thank you' many thousands more
That go before it.

LEONTES Stay your thanks a while,
And pay them when you part.

POLIXENES Sir, that's tomorrow.
I am questioned by my fears of what may chance
Or breed upon our absence. That may blow
No sneaping winds at home, to make us say
'This is put forth too truly'! Besides, I have stayed
To tire your royalty.

LEONTES We are tougher, brother,
Than you can put us to't.

POLIXENES No longer stay.

LEONTES
One sev'n-night longer.

POLIXENES Very sooth, tomorrow.

LEONTES
We'll part the time between's then; and in that
I'll no gainsaying.

POLIXENES Press me not, beseech you, so.
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i'th' world,
So soon as yours could win me. So it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, although
'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder
Were, in your love, a whip to me, my stay
To you a charge and trouble. To save both,
Farewell, our brother.

 And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf

 Upon his palm? – How now, you wanton calf!
 Art thou my calf?

MAMILLIUS Yes, if you will, my lord.

LEONTES
 Thou want'st a rough pash and the shoots that I have
 To be full like me; yet they say we are Almost as like as eggs. Women say so,
 That will say anything. But were they false
 As o'er-dyed blacks, as wind, as waters, false
 As dice are to be wished by one that fixes
 No bourn 'twixt his and mine, yet were it true
 To say this boy were like me. Come, sir page,
 Look on me with your welkin eye. Sweet villain!
 Most dear'st! My collop! Can thy dam? May't be?
 Affection, thy intention stabs the centre.
 Thou dost make possible things not so held,
 Communicat'st with dreams – how can this be? –
 With what's unreal thou coactive art,
 And fellow'st nothing. Then 'tis very credent
 Thou mayst co-join with something; and thou dost,
 And that beyond commission, and I find it,
 And that to the infection of my brains

 Away with such vain fancies and despair,
 Despair in God, and trust in Belzebub.
 Now go not backward: no, Faustus, be resolute;
 Why waverest thou? O, something soundeth in mine ears:
 'Abjure this magic, turn to God again'.
 Ay, and Faustus will turn to God again.
 To God? He loves thee not:
 The god thou servest is thine own appetite
 Wherein is fixed the love of Belzebub.
 To him I'll build an altar and a church,
 And offer luke-warm blood of new-born babes.

 That makes men foolish that do trust them most.

GOOD ANGEL

EVIL ANGEL

1 SCHOLAR

WAGNER

WAGNER

WAGNER

Yes sir, I will tell you; yet if you were not dunces you would never ask me such a question. For is not he corpus naturale? And is not that mobile? Then wherefore should you ask me such a question? But that I am by nature phlegmatic, slow to wrath, and prone to lechery – to love I would say – it were not for you to come within forty foot of the place of execution, although I do not doubt to see you both hanged the next sessions. Thus having triumphed over you, I will set my countenance like a precisian, and begin to speak thus: Truly my dear brethren, my master is within at dinner with Valdes and Cornelius, as this wine, if it could speak, it would inform your worships. And so the Lord bless you, preserve you, and keep you, my dear brethren, my dear brethren.

Have a care how you venture with me, sir, lest I pick your pocket, which will more vex your English humour than an Italian fortune will please you.

WILLMORE

How the devil cam'st thou to know my country and humour?

HELLENA

The first I guess by a certain forward impudence, which does not displease me at this time; and the loss of your money will vex you because I hope you have but very little to lose.

WILLMORE

Egad, child, thou'rt i'th' right; it is so little I dare not offer it thee for a kindness. But cannot you divine what other things of more value I have about me that I would more willingly part with?

HELLENA

Indeed no, that's the business of a witch, and I am but a gipsy yet. Yet without looking in your hand, I have a parlous guess 'tis some foolish heart you mean, an inconstant English heart, as little worth stealing as your purse.

WILLMORE

Nay, then thou dost deal with the devil, that's certain. Thou hast guessed as right as if thou hadst been one of that number it has languished for. I find you'll be better acquainted with it, nor can you take it in a better time; for I am come from sea, child, and Venus not being propitious to me in her own element, I have a world of love in store. Would you would be good-natured and take some on't off my hands.

HELLENA

Why, I could be inclined that way, but for a foolish vow I am going to make – to die a maid.

WILLMORE

Then thou art damned without redemption, and as I am a good Christian, I ought in charity to divert so wicked a design. Therefore prithee, dear creature, let me know quickly when and where I shall begin to set a helping hand to so good a work.

HELLENA

If you should prevail with my tender heart – as I begin to fear you will, for you have horrible loving eyes – there will be difficulty in't, that you'll hardly undergo for my sake.

Traitors ensteeped to clog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit

The divine Desdemona.

MONTANO What is she?

CASSIO She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts
A se'nnight's speed. Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renewed fire to our extincted spirits

Lungs, I will set a period,
To all thy labours: thou shalt be the master
Of my seraglio.

FACE

Good, sir.

MAMMON

But do you hear?

I'll geld you, Lungs.

FACE

Yes sir

OR

Re-sit D Read the extract printed below.

Explore how Jonson presents attitudes towards women, here and elsewhere in the play.

In your answer you should consider:

- Jonson's language choices
- the ways in which attitudes and values are conveyed.

FACE

Abel, thou art made.

DRUGGER Sir, I do thank his worship. [Bows]

FACE

Six o' thy legs more, will not do it, Nab.

He has brought you a pipe of tobacco, Doctor.

DRUGGER Yes, sir:

I have another thing, I would impart—

FACE

Out with it, Nab.

DRUGGER Sir, there is lodged, hard by me,

A rich young widow—

FACE Good! A bona roba?

DRUGGER

But nineteen, at the most.

FACE Very good, Abel.

DRUGGER

Marry, she's not in fashion, yet; she wears

A hood: but 't stands a cop.

FACE No matter, Abel.

DRUGGER

And, I do, now and then give her a fucus—

FACE

What! Dost thou deal, Nab?

SUBTLE I did tell you, Captain.

DRUGGER

And physic too sometime, sir: for which she trusts me

With all her mind. She's come up here, of purpose

To learn the fashion.

FACE Good (his match too!) on, Nab.

DRUGGER

And she does strangely long to know her fortune.

FACE

God's lid, Nab, send her to the Doctor, hither.

DRUGGER

Yes, I have spoke to her of his worship, already:

But she's afraid, it will be blown abroad

And hurt her marriage.

FACE Hurt it? 'Tis the way

To heal it, if 'twere hurt; to make it more

Followed, and sought: Nab, thou shalt tell her this.

She'll be more known, more talked of, and your widows

Are ne'er of any price till they be famous;

Their honour is their multitude of suitors:

Send her, it may be thy good fortune. What?

Thou dost not know.

DRUGGER No, sir, she'll never marry

Under a knight. Her brother has made a vow.

FACE

What, and dost thou despair, my little Nab,

Knowing, what the Doctor has set down for thee,

And, seeing so many, o' the city, dubbed?

One glass o' thy water, with a Madam, I know,

Will have it done, Nab. What's her brother? A knight?

SECTION B – Adaptation of Texts for an Audience

Answer both parts of Question 13.

- 13 (a) Read the source material which follows. Text A is an extract from the website of the National Anti-Vivisection Society; Text B is from the website of an organisation which uses animals for scientific research.

Using relevant information from these texts, write a speech for or against scientific testing on animals. Your speech could be delivered in one of the following contexts:

- a public meeting
- a college or school debate.

You should adapt the source material, using your own words as far as possible.

Your speech should be approximately 350 – 400 words in length.

- (b) Compare your own writing with either Text A or Text B in order to highlight the choices you have made in your writing. In your comparison you should show:

- how language and form have been used to suit audience and purpose
- how vocabulary and other stylistic features have been used to shape meaning and to achieve particular effects.

You should aim to write about 400 – 500 words in this comparative commentary.

END OF QUESTIONS

Text AWhat is vivisection?

Vivisection literally means the cutting up of a live animal; however dictionary definitions have been revised over the years, and this term has become a general label for all types of animal experiments.

In secret, inside the world's laboratories, animals are burnt, blinded, mutilated; their limbs are deliberately broken; they are force-fed products; noxious chemicals dripped into their eyes; irradiated; deliberately infected with disease, and more.

Yet these experiments can never be trusted. The fundamental flaw of animal-based research is that each species responds differently to drugs and chemicals. Therefore, results from animal tests are unreliable as a means of predicting likely effects in humans. Thus, animal experiments are unreliable, unethical, and unnecessary.

Nevertheless, animals suffer and die to test products used in the home, at work, in the car, in the garden and personal body care products. They are used in biological, chemical, and ballistic warfare testing. The United Kingdom's Porton Down 'defence' centre tests weapons on animals – almost every country in the world has some kind of similar weapons programme, which they develop on animals.

Animals are used in space programmes – terrified animals were shot into space before people; tests previously conducted on Earth are repeated in space to see the difference.

Animals are subjected to deep sea pressure and raised quickly to the surface to suffer decompression sickness ('the bends').

They are used to develop crude surgical procedures, despite the differences between the species. Their bones are broken to see how they mend.

Animal skulls are drilled open and hardware inserted so that the function of their brains can be recorded.

Baby animals are deprived of their mothers to see what effect it has on them in later life.

Animals are used to develop and test pharmaceutical products – both medical and 'pseudomedical' products – for example illicit (recreational) drugs, slimming drugs, or, a pharmaceutical company's new, improved, drug which might in fact be introduced to the market simply to improve sales. Of the 20–30,000 pharmaceutical products on the market today, the World Health Organisation has listed only 250 as being necessary for human health programmes.

In the UK, over 2.5 million procedures take place on animals every year. NAVS investigations have also revealed that there is a high level of wastage in the UK's animal labs – for every animal used, around 3 animals have been reared only to be killed because they are surplus to requirements.

Consistent and reliable records are not kept worldwide, but it is estimated that as many as 150 million animals are used globally, every year.

What happens to laboratory animals

Many people are opposed to animals suffering and dying in experiments for trivial products such as beauty cosmetics, but are less sure about research labelled as 'medical'. This is understandable, for we all want to see medical progress.

But are experiments on animals really necessary for progress? We think not. In fact the majority of medical research does not use animals, and where animals are used each species responds differently to drugs and chemicals – therefore results from animal tests are unreliable as a means of predicting likely effects in humans.

Text B

The Benefits of Animals in Scientific Research

There is considerable concern about the use of animals in scientific research, and all too often it is easy to lose sight of the advantages that have been generated through this work with animals.

Behind the scare stories and myths there lies an ever growing number of successes and advances in the field of human medicine. For many years, humans have been benefited from the healthcare advances that animal based research has achieved.

For example, here is a list of the average number of operations performed in the UK in a year:

- 3,000,000 operations under general anaesthetic
- 90,000 cataract operations
- 60,000 joint replacements
- 13,000 coronary bypasses
- 10,000 pacemakers implanted
- 6,000 heart valve repairs or replacements
- 4,000 heart defects corrected
- 2,500 corneal transplants
- 2,000 kidney transplants
- 400 heart/lung transplants

None of these operations or the techniques used during them would have been possible without previous animal research. It is likely that many of us will come into contact with someone who has benefited from these advances. The contribution that animals have made to human wellbeing is immense.

Advances continue to be made. Key-hole surgery, organ transplantation, skin grafting and the latest research into the prevention of genetic diseases are all benefiting from animal research.

It is certain that any unnecessary reduction in the amount of research would have serious consequences for future research into human illness and wellbeing.

The Number of Animals Used in Research

The number of animals involved in research is often used by Animal Rights protesters as an indicator of suffering. Clearly, this is an unrealistic argument as the total number does not reflect the condition of an individual animal. However, it is interesting to look at the facts behind the different figures to gain some perspective on animal testing.

Animals benefit man in many ways – clothing, food, science, medicine and entertainment. The scope of animal use is not a justification in itself but it helps to put animal research into perspective. For example, each year in the United States 5 billion animals are used in the food industry compared to the 18 million used in research – a ratio of 294:1. In the UK the RSPCA used to destroy an average of 1000 unwanted or sick animals every month. The figure in the USA was nearer to 1.2 million a month.

Therefore, while still large, the number of animals used in research is not excessive by comparison with the food industry or the numbers of destroyed pets.

It is also helpful to look at the types of animals involved. The common misconception is that dogs and monkeys are the main animals used. In fact dogs and monkeys account for a very small part of the total number of animals involved.

In the last 30 years the annual number of animals in scientific research has halved.
