Question 1

Study the following source material and then answer the questions which follow.

Source A Peter the Great, reflecting at the end of his reign on the defeat at the Battle of Narva in 1700

Our army was defeated by the Swedes. But one should remember what sort of army it was. The two regiments of Guards had never seen any field fighting, especially with regular troops. The other regiments consisted of raw recruits, both officers and soldiers. One cannot be surprised that against such an old, disciplined army, these 5 untried pupils got the worst of it. The Swedish victory was a sad and severe blow to us. But now we credit it to the goodness of God; for if we had conquered them then, when we knew so little of war, this might have had unfortunate consequences. That we lived through this disaster forced us to be industrious and gain experience.
