New Records for Women's Political Representation 2003 Elections to the Scottish Parliament

As a result of the 2003 elections, there is now a better gender balance in the Scottish Parliament. Women now make up 39.5% of all Members of the Scottish Parliament (MSPs) and 56% of Labour MSPs. Unlike the Parliament at Westminster, the Scottish Parliament has broken new ground by choosing equal numbers of women and men to chair its powerful all-purpose committees.

The Sex Discrimination (Election Candidates) Act 2002 allows political parties in the UK to use positive discrimination to increase the number of female candidates. Despite this legislation, only two political parties took the opportunity to adopt specific measures to achieve this – the Labour Party in Scotland and the Scottish Socialist Party (SSP).
