Section A: Research Methods

The social survey is a method of research that involves collecting data from a large sample of people. This is usually gathered by the use of a questionnaire or structured interview. The data that is created is normally referred to as quantitative.

Surveys tend to produce information which is less detailed than qualitative research, but they can be used to make generalisations over broad areas. Reliability is one of the strengths of surveys as the data collected can be easily coded and analysed and the process can be repeated by a different researcher in the same way.

Surveys involving the collection of information at one point in time are referred to as cross sectional surveys. They provide evidence of what is happening in the present. Longitudinal studies are used to study people over time and are useful for analysing changes in a society.

1 (a) What is meant by the following terms:

(i) questionnaire [2]

(ii) qualitative research [2]

(iii) data. [2]

(b) Explain why data collected using social surveys 'can be easily coded and analysed.' [4]

(d) Describe one strength and one limitation of structured interviews. [4]

(e) Describe one strength and one limitation of longitudinal studies. [4]

(f) Describe two strengths and two limitations of using questionnaires in sociological research. [8]

Section B: Culture and Socialisation

- 2 Sociologists believe individuals are socialised into society. Each society has its own distinctive cultural norms and values.
- (a) What is meant by the term norms? [2]
- (b) Describe two examples of cultural norms. [4]
- (c) Explain how a child may be socialised by their parents. [6]
- (d) To what extent are individuals shaped by socialisation, rather than instinct? [8]
- 3 Social control is necessary to ensure individuals accept the norms and values of society. This is carried out by formal and informal controls.
- (a) What is meant by informal social control? [2]
- (b) Describe two examples of formal social controls. [4]
- (c) Explain why there is a greater need for formal social controls in modern industrial societies. [6]
- (d) Some sociologists believe that the laws of society benefit all members of society equally. Assess this view. [8]

Section C: Social Stratification and Inequality

- 4 Some people may migrate to another country to live in search of a better life. Often they form an ethnic minority in the new country and can only find low paid work.
- (a) What is meant by the term migrate? [2]
- (b) Describe two reasons why people might move to a different country. [4]
- (c) Explain why ethnic minorities may only be able to find low paid work. [6]
- (d) How far are ethnic minorities disadvantaged in societies? [8]
- 5 Social class is a form of stratification found in many societies. This form of stratification allows some individuals to experience social mobility.
- (a) What is meant by the term social mobility? [2]
- (b) Describe two forms of stratification other than social class. [4]
